

BACHELOR OF ARTS WITH A MAJOR IN CLASSICAL AND ANCIENT NEAR EASTERN STUDIES

George Washington University's program in Classical and Ancient Near Eastern Studies (CANES) welcomes majors, minors, and other interested students to explore the ancient Mediterranean worlds of Greece, Rome, Israel, Egypt, and the Near East. In addition to studying one or more of the ancient Mediterranean languages—Greek, Latin, and Biblical Hebrew—students select courses from the wide range of disciplines that focus on antiquity, including literary studies, textual criticism, history, art history, and archaeology. Courses explore the ideas, values, people, places, events, and material culture of antiquity as well as how different post-antique societies have adopted and adapted these for their own ends. Students develop skills in critical thinking, analysis, writing, oral presentation, and visual literacy. Cocurricular opportunities include semester study abroad in Rome, Athens, or Jerusalem; summer archaeological excavations in Israel, Jordan, Italy, Greece, or elsewhere; and internships in Washington, DC in Latin pedagogy, curatorial practice, editorial work, and public policy advocacy for cultural heritage. Graduates pursue careers in law, medicine, business, museums, library sciences, publishing, secondary education (teaching Latin, English, or history), and higher education, among others.
