

DUAL DOCTOR OF EDUCATION IN THE FIELD OF HUMAN AND ORGANIZATIONAL LEARNING AND GRADUATE CERTIFICATE IN ASSESSMENT, TESTING, AND MEASUREMENT IN EDUCATION

The Graduate School of Education and Human Development offers a dual doctor of education in the field of human and organizational learning (<http://bulletin.gwu.edu/education-human-development/human-organizational-learning/doctor-human-organizational-learning/>) and graduate certificate in assessment, testing, and measurement in education (<http://bulletin.gwu.edu/education-human-development/educational-leadership/certificate-assessment-testing-measurement/>) degree. The dual program provides doctoral students with specialized expertise in assessment, testing, and measurement methodologies. These specialized technical skills can be applied to diverse areas of organizational learning, leadership, and change, including program evaluation, development of tests/assessments, and research and development.

The 12 credits earned in the graduate certificate program can be counted toward requirements for the doctoral degree. All requirements for both programs must be fulfilled.
