

MASTER OF SCIENCE IN HEALTH SCIENCES IN THE FIELD OF HEALTHCARE QUALITY

The master of science in health sciences in the field of healthcare quality program is an interdisciplinary program designed for healthcare professionals who want to advance their careers and become leaders in healthcare quality and patient safety.

The competency-based curriculum is informed by the National Center for Healthcare Leadership and the National Association for Healthcare Quality. It includes 20 competencies, ranging from health informatics and quality and patient safety to leadership theories, critical thinking, and analysis. Toward the end of the program, a capstone project allows for high-level integration of the program's competencies. Throughout the program, competency attainment is assessed at different points in time.

As one of the first two healthcare quality programs to receive national accreditation from the Commission for Accreditation of Healthcare Management Education, the healthcare quality program is designed to meet an emerging demand for quality and patient safety specialists who have the capacity and competence to grow and sustain a culture of continuous improvement at all levels and within every sector of the healthcare delivery system. Through a rigorous curriculum and an active-learning environment, the program helps prepare graduates for quality and patient safety leadership, management, and research positions within healthcare organizations or policy agencies. Upon completion of this program, students can expect to:

- Evaluate appropriate quality improvement patient safety, leadership, organizational change, and research theories/standards applicable to healthcare.
- Develop quality and patient safety improvement initiatives.
- Assess information technology systems to determine the level of support for quality improvement.
- Formulate organizational change plans to sustain a quality-focused culture.
